NORTHWEST STATE COMMUNITY COLLEGE CENTER FOR LIFELONG LEARNING TO WELCOME AMATEUR AUTHOR E.J. WESTHOVEN

ARCHBOLD, OHIO – The NSCC Center for Lifelong Learning is proud to present “So, you want to be an author? Things I’ve learned in my writing journey,” featuring amateur author E.J. Westhoven. The event will be held on Friday, April 4th at the Northwest State Community College Archbold Campus, room C211, from 9:00 a.m. to noon. The cost to attend the event is $13.00.

ABOUT E.J. WESTHOVEN

E.J. began writing during his time off work from some major surgery. After writing a fanfic (a story based on another story), he got an idea for an original story. Starting with a “Point A” and “Point B,” the story soon blossomed into a book. Then came the idea for a sequel, which was followed up with a prequel. Along with his self-published trilogy, E.J. has recently published his fourth book, “All These Years,” about a man who finds out he has a daughter who’s about to turn eighteen years old. E.J. will be discussing his journey and experiences on how he came to write his books.
